

The book was found

Something Must Be Done About Prince Edward County: A Family, A Virginia Town, A Civil Rights Battle

Synopsis

NEW YORK TIMESÂ BESTSELLERCombining hard-hitting investigative journalism and a sweeping family narrative, this provocative true story reveals a little-known chapter of American history: the period after theÂ Brown v. Board of EducationÂ decision when one Virginia school system refused to integrate. In the wake of the Supreme Courtâ™s unanimousÂ Brown v. Board of EducationÂ decision, Virginiaâ™s Prince Edward County refused to obey the law. Rather than desegregate, the county closed its public schools, locking and chaining the doors. The communityâ™s white leaders quickly established a private academy, commandeering supplies from the shuttered public schools to use in their all-white classrooms. Meanwhile, black parents had few options: keep their kids at home, move across county lines, or send them to live with relatives in other states. For five years, the schools remained closed. Kristen Green, a longtime newspaper reporter, grew up in Farmville and attended Prince Edward Academy, which did not admit black students until 1986. In her journey to uncover what happened in her hometown before she was born, Green tells the stories of families divided by the school closures and of 1,700 black children denied an education. As she peels back the layers of this haunting period in our nationâ™s past, her own familyâ™s roleâ”no less complex and painfulâ”comes to light. At once gripping, enlightening, and deeply moving,Â Something Must Be Done About Prince Edward CountyÂ is a dramatic chronicle that explores our troubled racial past and its reverberations today, and a timeless story about compassion, forgiveness, and the meaning of home.

Book Information

Paperback: 368 pages

Publisher: Harper Perennial; Reprint edition (April 26, 2016)

Language: English

ISBN-10: 0062268686

ISBN-13: 978-0062268686

Product Dimensions: 5.3 x 0.8 x 8 inches

Shipping Weight: 4.8 ounces (View shipping rates and policies)

Average Customer Review: 4.4 out of 5 starsÂ Â See all reviewsÂ (92 customer reviews)

Best Sellers Rank: #38,895 in Books (See Top 100 in Books) #26 inÂ Books > Education & Teaching > Schools & Teaching > Education Theory > History #30 inÂ Books > History > Americas > United States > African Americans > History #153 inÂ Books > History > Americas > United States > African Americans > Discrimination & Racism

Customer Reviews

Kristen Green's Something Must Be Done About Prince Edward County is compelling, timely, brave, and so deeply necessary that its presence next to me, its pages still warm from my hand and its messages stoking the fires of change in my belly, is palpable. This book is personal, in more ways than one. It is political, in more ways than one. I hope it tops the best-seller lists for months to come, for it is a book we desperately need to read as a nation. Perhaps you have already read some reviews of this book, and seen that others find it compelling because it weaves together memoir and history so well, telling a story few outside the small community of Prince Edward County know by heart. These things are all true. The book is a well-told narrative, the author's personal experience and family history—her grandfather helped to found an all-white private school during segregation, contributing to the closure of public schools in Prince Edward County and locking black children out of an education for five years—providing the backdrop for a history that needs to be shared before it can be transcended. While the book is a quick and fascinating read that gives readers both personal and political perspective, it is more than that. It is a history told by a white person who is aware of her whiteness, and speaking the truth of white middle-class experience—the guilt, shame, and isolation that come with being born on the privileged side of an unjust system. White Americans have a tendency to think of discussions about race as centering only on people of color, as if whiteness is not a race. In these pages, we hear the truth of race and class, simply as story.

The book's author who is white and married to a man of American Indian heritage tries to connect the reader to the struggle of racism by using her fears about the discrimination her family has faced. She does acknowledge that her struggle is not as intense as the struggle would be for someone who is black. For me, as a black woman and a cousin to some of the displaced children she wrote about, the read left me feeling like she still didn't quite understand the depth of black racism vs any other skin color. It was like drinking a glass of skim milk instead of whole milk. It was still nourishing and refreshing but something was missing. Nevertheless, Mrs. Green told a story that needed telling. She brought to light a dirty nasty secret that carried shame and bred distrust then and now. Although it was not our shame, it still kept our tongues bound and we became unwitting partners in the silent shame of Prince Edward County. It took a lot of courage for her to face her relatives and old family friends and ask those hard questions. Being thought of as a traitor to her family and white heritage had to take a toll on her. As in the past, we owe a lot to the many white people who took a stand, stood tall and brave, and gave our plight a loud voice. Thank you, Mrs. Green. Some of my cousins were affected by the school closings in Farmville. Many ended up in Pennsylvania, Washington, DC, and Maryland. Not many of our grandparents' 17+ children and none their grandchildren stayed in Farmville. They all knew the value of an education. from the 17+ children, there were 53 first cousins and most have done very well. Ministers, teachers, professors, PhDs, business owners, lots of college degrees, and awesome family reunions.

Download to continue reading...

Something Must Be Done About Prince Edward County: A Family, a Virginia Town, a Civil Rights Battle
Civil Rights Music: The Soundtracks of the Civil Rights Movement
Dorothy Must Die Stories: No Place Like Oz, The Witch Must Burn, The Wizard Returns (Dorothy Must Die Novella)
Gay Power!: The Stonewall Riots and the Gay Rights Movement, 1969 (Civil Rights Struggles Around the World)
A Collection of PERRY COUNTY ALABAMA PIONEERS BIOGRAPHIES & GENEALOGIES VOLUME II (PERRY COUNTY, ALABAMA PIONEERS BIOGRAPHIES & GENEALOGIES Book 2)
The First Republican Army: The Army of Virginia and the Radicalization of the Civil War (A Nation Divided: Studies in the Civil War Era)
Chancellorsville Battlefield (includes Fredericksburg and Salem Church), Spotsylvania County, Virginia
John Brown, Abolitionist: The Man Who Killed Slavery, Sparked the Civil War, and Seeded Civil Rights
30th Battalion Virginia Sharpshooters (The Virginia Regimental Histories Series)
A Guide to the Snakes of Virginia (Virginia Department of Game and Inland Fisheries, Wildlife Diversity Division, Special Publication No. 2.1)
National Audubon Society Field Guide to the Mid-Atlantic States: New York, Pennsylvania, New Jersey, Maryland, Delaware, West Virginia, Virginia
Rock Climbing Virginia, West Virginia, and Maryland (Regional Rock Climbing Series)
The Heir Apparent: A Life of Edward VII, the Playboy
Prince Bridgeton: In and around the Old County Town (Images of America)
The Battle of South Mountain: The History of the Civil War Battle that Led the Union and Confederate Armies to Antietam
Legal Handbook for Photographers: The Rights and Liabilities of Making Images (Legal Handbook for Photographers: The Rights & Liabilities of)
Your Legal Rights Online (Legal Literacy: Know the System, Know Your Rights)
Racial Profiling and Discrimination: Your Legal Rights (Know Your Rights)
California Landlord's Law Book, The: Rights & Responsibilities (California Landlord's Law Book : Rights and Responsibilities)
A Short Residence in Sweden & Memoirs of the Author of 'The Rights of Woman': AND Memoirs of the Author of 'The Rights of Woman' (Classics)

Dmca